[In the Spellman living room. Sabrina is lying on the settee writing, Salem sits in his favourite spot on the cupboard behind. Hilda and Zelda are arranging flowers around the room.]

Hilda I love this time of year. Christmas carols, sleigh rides, gigantic electric bills.

Zelda Sabrina, do you want to give us a hand?

Sabrina In a second, I'm revising my Christmas wish list. This year I'm hoping for a computer, a mountain bike, oh and this great ski jacket I saw at the mall.

Salem You're not exactly the little match girl are ya?

Zelda Those sound pretty expensive Sabrina.

Sabrina I know, that's why I've prepared a list of back up gift ideas in a variety of price ranges.

[She opens out the list and it stretches to the floor and then some and gives it to Zelda.]

Sabrina Gotta go.

[She grabs her bag but stops before reaching the door.]

Sabrina Oh and you'll note on the bottom I've listed the times I won't be around so you can wrap my presents.

[Sabrina leaves.]

Hilda (To Zelda) Don't worry. I went through that 'gimme' phase, it'll pass.

[They get back to arrange the Christmas decorations. Zelda arranges the nativity models.]

Zelda You're right.

Hilda Hey! Gimme that wise man.

Zelda Well I guess we're almost finished decorating except for the tree.

[Hilda points at a spot by the French windows and a huge burst of smoke fills the room. When it clears there's a beautifully decorated Christmas tree standing there.]

Zelda (Continues.) You know, it's lovely but Christmas is a mortal holiday. Shouldn't we do the tree the mortal way?

Hilda Okay, I'll conjure up a plastic one.

Zelda No, I meant shouldn't we go and buy a tree and decorate it by hand?

Hilda All right.

[Zelda points at the tree and with just a shimmer of sparkles it vanishes. The sister's head for the door but Zelda comes to a stop.]

Zelda Where do they sell trees?

Hilda The forest?
