

Metaphorical Expressions:

-You make my blood boil!

-He's just blowing off some steam.

-Now I've got the whole picture

-We just got over a little bump in the road, but I hope it's smooth sailing from here on.

-Their marriage is on the rocks

-His argument smells fishy to me

-Now there's an idea you can really sink your teeth into.

-Let's put that idea on the back burner for a while

-I'm a little rusty.

-We've been trying to solve this problem all day and we're running out of steam.

I've forgotten how to do that job properly, I need more practise.

He's just getting rid of some of his anger.

That's a really good idea that we can do something with.

Now I understand what happened.

Let's not do anything with that idea right now, rather leave it for later on.

I don't like what he is saying, there's something not right about it.

We've worked really hard to find a solution but now we're running out of ideas and energy.

They are not getting on very well, their marriage is over.

You make me really angry.

For a while things were not going too well but hopefully now they will be better.